

April 2, 2010 Statement by Cynthia Gerdes of Hell's Kitchen re: Minneapolis Street Food Proposal:

The moment our City Council approves food vending trucks this morning, downtown Minneapolis will take a quantum leap forward in vibrancy and excitement. Thank you to Lisa Goodman's office for the huge push. Thank you to the entire committee for listening to our last-minute concerns and removing the limits so ALL applicants could participate, from tiny Lake Avenue gems to downtown jewels such as Barrio. And thank you, Metro Magazine, for accurately reporting our support at an earlier council meeting (one blogger who didn't actually attend it took a comment I made out of context, but the record proves exactly the opposite).

And a huge, appreciative WOW for the City Council's lightning speed in approving the amendment. If Hell's Kitchen joins the fun, our truck will be named Hell on Wheels, which is what we're now fondly calling Councilperson Goodman.
